- 1. The Hungarian AAA divisions are under the National AAA Command in Budapest, which is in turn subordinate to the Defense Ministry.
- 2. A distinction must be made between the so-called "home divisions", which are independent, and the non-independent or "route divisions" of AAA, Both types of divisions at present consist of four regiments each, but they are different in number of batteries and in equipment.
- The non-independent divisions consist of two medium AAA egiments (85 mm guns) of two sections each, with two batteries to a section, and two light AAA regiments with automatic 37 mm guns. The light AAA regiments now have two sections of three batteries each. Each battery of both the light and medium regiments has four heavy machine guns, an R/3 radio station and a communications platoon. The regiments have an observation and information platoon, a communications company, a machine gun company and supporting services.
- 4. The independent AAA divisions have two regiments, each with three heavy and medium sections, and two light AAA regiments. The heavy and medium sections have three batteries each. The light AAA regiments are composed like those in the non-independent divisions. The independent divisions, according to the area in which they are intended to operate, have heavy searchlights, listening and motorized radar units.
- 5. Bown to the fall of 1950 there was only one independent AAA regiment in Budapest. In a reorganization two more regiments were set up, and the regiment became a division. In November 1951, cadres from this division were used to form a second AAA division, with its station at Komfrom.
